Research Ethics and Responsibilities

Dr. SUNITA SAKURE

Department of Microbiology

Introduction

- What is research?
- Types of research
- Stake holders of research
- Whose ethics and responsibilities?
- Researcher's motivation
  - Advances knowledge,

- Leads to discoveries that will benefit individuals and society,
    - Furthers professional advancement, and/or
    - Results in personal gain and satisfaction.

Presentation Outline

- What are Research Ethics? (aka, Responsible Conduct of Research, aka, Research Integrity)
- Research Misconduct
- Conflict of Interest
- Authorship and Publication

- Intellectual Property
    - Technology Transfer
    - Data Collection & Data Management
    - Data Ownership & Data Sharing
    - Mentor/Trainee Relationship

What do we mean by research ethics?

An ‘ethic’ is a moral principle or a code of conduct which ... governs what people do. It is concerned with the way people act or behave.

The term ‘ethics’ usually refers to the moral principles, guiding conduct, which are held by a group or even a profession.

Research Ethics

“.. is a kind of applied or practical ethics, meaning that it attempts to resolve not merely general issues but also specific problems that arise in the conduct of research. Its goal is to determine the moral acceptability and appropriateness of specific conduct and to establish the actions that moral agents ought to take in particular situation. Research ethics is therefore not merely theoretical. It aims to establish practical moral norms and standards for the conduct of research.”

In general terms, “research ethics” is simply good citizenship applied to professional life.

Four basic tenants

- HONESTY- conveying information truthfully and honoring commitments,
  - ACCURACY- reporting findings precisely and taking care to avoid errors,
  - EFFICIENCY- using resources wisely and avoiding waste,
  - OBJECTIVITY- letting the facts speak for themselves and avoiding improper bias.

Ten most important things to know about Research Ethics

- Be Honest
- Be Fair
- Do no harm
- Know and Follow the Rules
- Bad rules should be changed, not broken
- Be a good citizen
- When in doubt, ask questions
- Listen to the still small voice of your conscience, especially when it's being overwhelmed by the cacophony of stress
- If you suspect unethical behavior, proceed cautiously

What is Research Misconduct?

- Research misconduct is defined as fabrication, falsification, or plagiarism in proposing, performing, or reviewing research, or in reporting research results.
  - Fabrication is making up data or results and recording or reporting them.
  - Falsification is manipulating research materials, equipment, or processes, or changing or omitting data or results such that the research is not accurately represented in the research record.
  - Plagiarism is the appropriation of another person's ideas, processes, results, or words without giving appropriate credit.

- Research misconduct does not include differences of opinion.

Breaches of the Code and Research Misconduct

- Research misconduct involves all of the following:
  - an alleged Breach of the Code
  - intent & deliberation, recklessness or gross and persistent negligence
  - serious consequences
- Examples of research misconduct:
  - fabrication, falsification, plagiarism or deception
  - failure to declare or manage a conflict of interest

- failure to follow research proposals as approved by a research ethics committee
  - wilful concealment or facilitation of research misconduct

Researcher Obligations

As researchers, there are three sets of obligations, namely:

- To honor the trust that their colleagues place in them (researchers trust their colleagues to have used appropriate analytic and statistical techniques in gathering of data)
- To have an obligation to themselves, and

- To act in ways that serve the public (including the university and its stakeholders).

The scientific enterprise is built on a foundation of trust, between society and researchers and their institution.

- Researchers HAVE committed misconduct in science
- Researchers ARE penalized, including research debarment

Conflicts of Commitment

Conflicts of commitment arise from situations that place competing demands on researchers' time and loyalties. Care needs to be taken to assure that these commitments do not inappropriately interfere with one another. These range from:

- ✓ Allocation of time
- ✓ Relationships with students
- ✓ Use of Resources
- ✓ Disclosure of Affiliations
- ✓ Representing outside entities

Relationship with Students

- Academic researchers involved in start-up ventures often have opportunities to hire students.
- As mentors, they have a primary obligation to help students develop into independent researchers.
- Should an individual who is both the researcher's student and employee be advised to develop a promising idea that could lead to an independent career or to work on a more routine problem that will benefit the start-up company?
- Situations such as these create conflicts and should be avoided or appropriately managed.

Authorship

The names that appear at the beginning of a paper serve one important purpose. They let others know who conducted the research and should get credit for it. Consequently, the authors listed on papers should fairly and accurately represent the person or persons responsible for the work in question.

- ✓ Contribution
- ✓ Importance
- ✓ Corresponding/primary author

Publication

Researchers share the results of their works with colleagues and the public in a variety of ways. These range from:

- Laboratory meetings,
- Workshops,
- In seminars, and
- At professional meetings.

Whether structured or informal, controlled or free ranging, responsible publication in research should ideally meet some minimum standards, such as:

- a full and fair description of the work undertaken,
  - an accurate report of the results, and
  - an honest and open assessment of the findings.

Researcher's Responsibilities

- Comply with policies and procedures
- Comply with ethical principles
- Report allegations of research misconduct
- Ensure findings are disseminated responsibly, accurately and properly
- Cite relevant work appropriately and accurately
- Maintain confidentiality
- Adhere to authorship criteria • Participate in peer review
  - Supervisors:

- Ensure training, mentor & provide support, maintain oversight of research

Responsible Conduct in Research is Simply Good Citizenship Applied to Professional Life

Research responsibilities

(A) The researcher's responsibility towards science and the society:

Any research project undertaken must be:

1. Purposeful.

2. It must have a chance to succeed, and

3. Yield useful results.

(B) A researcher therefore has the responsibility to be absolutely truthful about:

1. How he/she is conducting the research

2. His/her progress

3. Disbursement of funds and the necessity for such disbursement.

(C) The researcher's responsibility towards his or her colleagues:

- Some researchers spend their entire lives in pursuit of a single fact. In a professional society, it is incumbent upon all members to not only respect but actually safeguard the rights of their colleagues.

- It is therefore imperative that all research done by others and used in relation with the current project be adequately and correctly referenced so that the rights of those who actually produced the results are preserved.

(D) Referencing is also the fulfillment of a responsibility towards colleagues from another perspective.

By providing adequate referencing, your colleagues would be able to:

1. Qualify, verify and further justify the basis of your work

2. More easily access work that may help THEM in their work.

Remember, research is best to be thought of as collaboration not competition
